

Niederecker new agronomist for Buchheit

By Beth Chism
bchism@perryvillenews.com

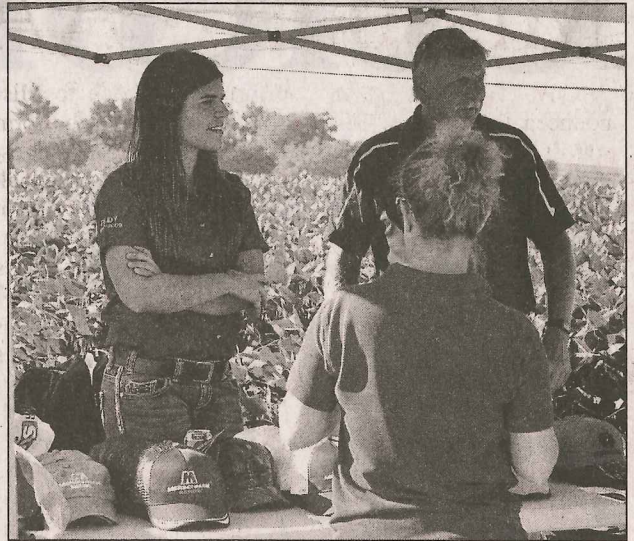

Buchheit, Inc. is proud to introduce their new agronomist, Katlyn Niederecker. Farmers who attended the Buchheit I-55 Tech Park tour have already met Niederecker. She assisted with the tours of the soybean and corn plots during that event.

Niederecker grew up in Jefferson County and went to high school in Imperial, Missouri. She then attended Truman State University majoring in agriculture where she earned her bachelor degree. Niederecker then attended the University of Missouri where she received her masters degree.

Niederecker served as an intern for Buchheit's during the summer of 2013 where she worked in the feed mill and grading seed during fescue and wheat harvest.

"I loved it and missed the area so much I decided to come back after school," she said. Niederecker will be working as an agronomist and sales manager for the Buchheit Agri Division starting with seed sales.

Katlyn Niederecker, agronomist for Buchheit, Inc. assists farmers during the recent I-55 Tech Park tour.